Invitation to Paw Dalgaard's inaugural professor lecture

On Friday 22 November at 15.00-16.00, Paw Dalgaard, new professor at the National Food Institute, will hold his inaugural lecture.

Paw Dalgaard will give a lecture on background, status and perspectives within his research in predictive food microbiology. The purpose of his research is to increase understanding of growth and survival of microorganisms in food, and to improve assessment and management of microbiological food quality and safety.

The National Food Institute, Technical University of Denmark, invites everybody to this lecture and the subsequent reception in:

Meeting room S.01
Building 101A, ground floor
Anker Engelundsvej 1
2800 Kgs. Lyngby, Copenhagen

Please register on www.food.dtu.dk

Yours sincerely,
Jørgen Schlundt, director of the National Food Institute